

WELL, here it is, fellows: The cook book you've been asking for in your letters. It has been a terrific job lining up these seven daily menus of balanced meals, figuring out food lists and amounts, writing instructions, checking and re-checking. But it has been fun, too, and I know that the recipes work.

Now, before you get into the menus, here are a few pointers:

Amounts: The amounts given will feed 7 boys generously, 8 boys well. When you use the menus for a Patrol of 5 or 6, subtract one-quarter of the amount. For a Patrol of 9 or 10, add one-quarter.

Food Buying: I've tried to be very specific about the buying. Where "medium size potatoes" are mentioned, I've given the weight also. What is "medium size" to you may be "giant size" to me. Bread is given in slices—I haven't come across two companies that cut their bread the same way. For breakfast, I've said "Cereal" only—meaning such things as Corn Flakes, Wheaties, Kix, Cheerios, and so on. Pick your own. You may not always be able to get certain things the food lists call for—so get something else. If you can't get butter, for instance, use margarine or cream cheese. If you can't get cup cakes, get some other cake.

Staples: Every cook knows about certain things that are needed to "polish off" a meal—salt, pepper, vinegar, sugar, mustard and the like. Most of the time you can't measure the amounts. It's a matter of taste rather than ounces. So I've just mentioned them to remind you to include them in your list.

Equipment: The menus call for a simple Patrol cooking outfit consisting of 4 one-gallon pots and 2 frying pans, 8 to 10 inches in diameter. You'll also need the following: 1 small bowl, 1 grater, 1 lemon squeezer, 1 measuring cup (all measurements given are LEVEL), 2 large spoons, 2 ten-quart pails (one for your water supply, one for heating dish water). Each boy-will, of course, have his own knife, fork, spoon, plate, cup, bowl, and so on.

Preparation: When you use the step-by-step method described in the menus, two fellows should be able to prepare breakfast in 30 minutes, lunch in 30 minutes, and dinner in not over 75 minutes. But notice the reminder at every meal: Read FULL instructions TWICE before starting.

Serving: Good food deserves to be well served! Put it on the table in an attractive form. And, when everything is ready, sit down with your whole Patrol, family style, for a civilized meal that everyone will enjoy.

Show me a Patrol that does a good job of cooking in camp, and I'll show you a Patrol that's apt to do a good job of everything else in Scouting.

That's the kind of Patrol I hope yours is!
